

Automatic target recognition systems require enormous computational power. STAP-Boy leverages the architecture of commercial graphics processing units (GPUs) to provide this power affordably.